ABSTRACT

ANALISIS AFIKS DERIVASIONAL DAN INFLEKSIONAL DALAM ARTIKEL TERPILIH DI ISLAMWEB.NET

Irma Kusmiati Dewi

42.2021.1.3.8024

Afiks derivasional dan infleksional adalah dua jenis struktur morfologis dalam bahasa. Afiks derivasional memodifikasi makna dan kelas kata, menciptakan kata-kata baru, sementara afiks infleksional hanya menyesuaikan bentuk kata, tanpa mengubah makna atau kelasnya. Penelitian ini menyelidiki afiks derivasional dan infleksional dalam artikel-artikel dari islamweb.net. Penelitian ini memiliki dua tujuan utama: (1) untuk mengklasifikasikan afiks derivasional dan infleksional yang ditemukan dalam artikel-artikel terpilih dan (2) untuk menganalisis bagaimana afiks ini berkontribusi pada pembentukan kata. Penelitian ini menggunakan pendekatan kualitatif deskriptif, dengan fokus pada tujuh artikel terpilih yang diterbitkan di islamweb.net antara April dan Agustus 2024. Untuk mengumpulkan data, peneliti menggunakan analisis dokumen, dan langkah-langkah untuk menganalisis menggunakan teori Krippendorf, seperti identifikasi, klasifikasi, tabulasi, dan deskripsi. Peneliti menemukan 1253 afiks, terbagi menjadi kategori derivasional dan infleksional. Penelitian ini mengidentifikasi 27 jenis afiks derivasional, termasuk sufiks seperti -ion, -ment, dan -al, serta prefiks seperti un-, dis-, dan pre-. Sebaliknya, afiks infleksional mencakup enam jenis, seperti -s, -ing, dan -ed. Secara keseluruhan, afiks infleksional lebih sering muncul, berjumlah 799 data, dibandingkan dengan 458 data afiks derivasional. Hal ini menunjukkan bahwa afiks infleksional lebih umum digunakan dalam artikel yang dipilih, karena mencerminkan peran fungsionalnya dalam struktur gramatikal daripada perubahan kelas kata.

ABSTRACT

AN ANALYSIS OF DERIVATIONAL AND INFLECTIONAL AFFIXES IN SELECTED ARTICLES OF ISLAMWEB.NET

Irma Kusmiati Dewi

42.2021.1.3.8024

Derivational and inflectional affixes are two types of morphological structures in language. Derivational affixes modify the meaning and class of a word, creating entirely new words, while inflectional affixes adjust only the word's form, without altering its meaning or class. This study investigates derivational and inflectional affixes in articles from islamweb.net. The research has two main objectives: (1) to classify the derivational and inflectional affixes found in selected articles and (2) to analyze how these affixes contribute to word formation. The research utilizes a descriptive qualitative approach, focusing on seven selected articles published on islamweb.net between April and August 2024. To collect the data, the researcher used document analysis, and the steps to analyze used the Krippendorff theory, such as identification, classification, tabulation, and description. The findings reveal 1253 affixes, divided into derivational and inflectional categories. The study identified 27 types of derivational affixes, including suffixes like -ion, -ment, and -al, and prefixes like un-, dis-, and pre-. In contrast, inflectional affixes included six types, such as -s, -ing, and -ed. Overall, inflectional affixes were more frequent, totaling 799 data, compared to 458 data of derivational affixes. This indicates that inflectional affixes are more prevalent in the selected articles, possibly reflecting their functional role in grammatical structure over word class changes.
